Dzinisi gúja tlat'a (Good day y'all),

It's finally Halloween time!

But to couples, I beg of you, please don't dress up as the Mario brothers, that's weird. Instead dress up as condiments or iconic couples like Travis Barker and Kourtney K. And don't do weird things like whistle at night.

Stay safe out there y'all and no more AI posters, drink some water.

Siyisgaas (Thank you) ★

N

Tansi! My name is Mickayla Atcheynum Carlson, and I am Cree from Sweetgrass First Nation. I grew up in the small resort village of Meota, Saskatchewan, where much of my childhood was spent between my Moshum's farm, usually on the back of a horse, and the lake with my parents. I also spent more than 10 years in 4-H, including several years as president of my club. Between horses, public speaking, projects, meetings, and plenty of responsibility, 4-H played a big part in shaping who I am. It taught me how to lead, work with others, and show up for the things and people I care about. Those lessons have stayed with me ever since.

I recently completed my Bachelor of Commerce in Management from the University of Saskatchewan's Edwards School of Business, along with certificates in Indigenous Business Administration and Introductory Agriculture. Choosing that combination was intentional. I wanted my education to reflect both where I come from and where I hope to go, while allowing me to explore the areas that matter to me.

Throughout university, I became especially interested in Indigenous economic development and the role strong communication can play in supporting communities and moving ideas forward. I enjoy finding the story behind something, connecting people to it, and figuring out how to take an idea from "what if?" to something real. That intersection of communication, community, and meaningful work is something I'm excited to continue exploring in my new role with the Tsuut'ina Nation.

Outside of work, I have a strong connection to the western way of life and the values that come with it. I also love anything that gives me an excuse to be creative. I have a small passion project called Sunsets & Savannas, a western-inspired vintage business where I source pre-loved clothing and give it a second life. It combines a few of my favorite things: western style, storytelling, and finding something special where someone else might have overlooked it. I'm also an avid traveler and have been fortunate enough to visit 23 countries by the ripe age of 23. Of all the places I've been, though, I still find the most peace on horseback in the Prairies. I love the hustle and bustle of city life and chasing new opportunities, but nothing grounds me quite like being out on the land, surrounded by wide-open spaces and being back in the saddle.

In true Hannah Montana fashion, I like to think I get the best of both worlds. More than anything, I believe in investing in yourself, staying curious, and being willing to take chances that help you grow. I'm very grateful that my next chapter has brought me to the Tsuut'ina Nation, and I look forward to getting to know the community, contributing wherever I can, and seeing where this new chapter takes me.

Truth and Reconciliation

“...because we are still here, we are still proud, and they never broke us...”

- Xàkijí-tii Ellery Starlight (Súh Xàkijà)

Maryanne has worked the majority of her life. She started her educational journey at the Adult Learning Centre (ALC), where she completed her Grade 12. I remember telling her, "You can't get very far with a good job these days without your Grade 12."

She listened, worked hard, and continued moving forward. Not long after completing Grade 12, Maryanne applied to the Social Work Program at Maskwacis College. Over the next two years, I watched her work toward completing her diploma. There were times when I saw her become frustrated and overwhelmed. She would sometimes be up late at night working on assignments, but she never gave up.

Her siblings encouraged her to keep going and not to give up. There were also times when Maryanne would come over, and I would help by proofreading her essays. We all watched her put in the hard work, dedication, and determination it took to reach this accomplishment.

Today, I would like to congratulate my daughter, Maryanne Big Plume–Pretty Young Man, on receiving her degree. We are so very proud of you and everything you have accomplished. May you continue to inspire others to follow their dreams and never give up, no matter how difficult the journey may be.

As your late brother said, "Education is the new buffalo."

Congratulations, Maryanne. We are proud of you and wish you all the best in your future.

Dādānast'áda,

Sizi Naomi Sage Eagletail ata.

I am honoured to serve as the Interim Director of Tsuut'ina Nation Child and Family Services. I am a Tsuut'ina Nation member and mother of five, with experience in child and family services, education, family liaison work, advocacy, and Board governance.

I hold an Indigenous Master of Social Work degree from Blue Quills University and a First Nations and Indigenous Director Designation (FNI.Dir) through the First Nations University of Canada Board Governance Program. My education and professional experiences have contributed to the knowledge and perspective I bring to this leadership role.

My approach is child-centred and grounded in respect for each child's connection to family, culture, and Nation.

As a mother and a member of Tsuut'ina Nation, I recognize the responsibility that comes with serving our children and families. As I step into this temporary role, I look forward to working respectfully alongside our staff, leadership, families, community partners, and Board during my time as Acting Director.

"It is an honour to serve my Nation in this role. I carry this responsibility with respect, with our children at the centre of my approach, and with gratitude for the opportunity to contribute during this time."

SKATE JAM

Tsuut'ina Skateboard Program

"Our Summer-End Skateboarding event gave youth an opportunity to come together, showcase the skills they developed throughout the summer, and celebrate their progress. With the support of our community partners, Tsuut'ina Recreation and local skate teams and shops; Shreds, Ninetimes, The Source, and Cousins.

The event brought together a strong network of people who support youth through skateboarding. Beyond learning tricks and techniques, skateboarding teaches patience, discipline, confidence, resilience, and the importance of getting back up after a fall. These lessons connect directly to our focus on wellness, prevention, and education by creating positive spaces where youth can build skills, develop healthy habits, and form meaningful connections.

The event was ultimately a celebration of youth, community, and the growth that comes from having opportunities to learn, practice, and challenge yourself."

-Alaine Crowchief

DRIVE IN MOVIE

On Friday October 2, 2026, the Youth Program and the Community Comprehensive Plan took over the west parking lot of the Seven Chiefs Sportsplex to co-host a drive-in movie night for the Nation. Over 100 attendees (plus those driving by on Bullhead Road) got to watch the inter-galactic adventures of the Mandalorian and Grogu on Fresh Air Media's large digital screen.

The event was a kick start to fall programming and it did not disappoint; the attendees were welcomed by the youth staff who provided a complimentary windshield cleaning for optimal viewing of the screen. Once attendees parked, they were encouraged to walk over to pick up popcorn, soda, candy and a taco in a bag which was catered by Kim & Nora Big Plume and Halie Whitney.

The event also featured a Star Wars themed costume contest and there were two youth attendees dressed up, and both won gift cards for their endeavors. There were also a couple prize draws, most noteworthy was the beaded Super Mario medallion that was donated by the Tsuut'ina Museum as a prize, the lucky young winner was excited and immediately put it on!

Before the movie started Elder Eva Manyhorses said a prayer, followed by Minor Chief Corrine Eagletail and Leroy Meguinis who both made opening remarks about the importance of bringing the community together. Another important guest who was in attendance was the Chiila Beaver, who has been staying home as of late but made a triumphant return to community engagement and hopefully will be making more appearances this fall.

Lastly, a massive SIYISGAAS!! to Fresh Air Media, Seven Chiefs Sportsplex, Glen Starlight & Tsuut'ina Security Company, Kim & Nora Big Plume & Halie Whitney, Quaid Onespot-Whitney & the Tsuut'ina Museum, Elder Eva Manyhorses, Minor Chiefs Corrine Eagletail & Leroy Meguinis, Megan Onespot & Chiila Elementary School, the "Crew" made of up of Chris, Ethan, Isagha, Jaden, Kendall M., Navada, Nicole, Riel, Rhett and event MVP - Preston Big Crow!!

Also, this event would not be possible without the behind-the-scenes support of Jordan Big Plume, Angela Heavefire, and Lorne Cogswell. And a big thank you to the following sponsors: Carmen Littlelight & the office of Communications, Everett Manyhorses & the office of Treaty Initiatives, Brenda Big Belly & the office of Permits & Residency. And finally, a Siyisgaas to the attendees who showed up and supported this event.

THAT WAS SOMETHING WONDROUS

CELEBRATING THE PEOPLE BEHIND YEAR TWO

On Saturday, September 12, Something Wondrous, Southern Alberta's Indigenous Music Festival, returned to the Taza Park Sales & Marketing Centre for its second year. Families, Elders, friends and neighbours spent the afternoon together, moving between live music, a first-ever runway and a market of Indigenous makers.

A day like this comes together because of the talented people who share their gifts with it. This month, we're turning the spotlight on them.

THE GRAND ENTRY

Setting the Tone at Noon

The festival opened with the Grand Entry, as dancers entered the main tent in full regalia. Our gratitude goes to every dancer who shared this moment with us, and to Earl Jacobs, who brought it together with Amy Meguinis, then carried the afternoon as our MC.

THE MAIN STAGE

Blues, Hip Hop and Everything in Between

Samantha Whitney and her daughters opened the main stage as a family, and Tsuut'ina's own Redfoot followed with hip hop. Tyler Two Guns returned from last year's festival, this time with a full band, before Cree Métis headliner Bebe Buckskin wove blues, rock and soul together with Cree language. Thank you to every musician for bringing your sound to Something Wondrous.

THE FASHION SHOWCASE

A Runway Makes Its Debut

For the first time in the festival's history, Indigenous designers took the runway. Authentically Curated and founder Merlene Saloy-Eagle Speaker produced and creatively directed the showcase, featuring designs by Faith Starlight, Marcie Twoguns and Bodeen Twoyoungmen. To the designers, the models and the Authentically Curated team, thank you for a debut that set the bar high.

THE MARKET AND FOOD VENDORS

Shopping Bags and Full Plates

Indoors and out, the artisan market brought together beadwork, jewellery, regalia, art, natural wellness products and honey harvested on Tsuut'ina land. Grey Eagle Street Eats, The Happy Food Truck by Rick's Wild Game served everything from poutine to Saskatoon Berry Dumplings. To our amazing food vendors, thank you for bringing your craft and your kitchens to the festival.

THE LANYARD TEACHINGS WORKSHOP

Teachings in Every Colour

Inside the Marketing Centre, Tsuut'ina artist Audra Simeon-Rider hosted the Lanyard Teachings Colouring Workshop throughout the day. Guests of all ages coloured artwork based on her lanyard design in the traditional Medicine Wheel colours, learning the symbolism and teachings the design carries.

Something Wondrous is part of our long-term commitment to honour Tsuut'ina culture and build prosperity close to home. To everyone who joined us, thank you for sharing the day. We look forward to gathering with you again!

HORROR REVIEWS

So far for 2026, this is what I watched this year. 10/10 recommend for my fellow horror fans/enthusiasts.

Viewer discretion is advised.

Companion –

This is about an AI robot whose purpose is solely to serve humans. She's programmed to be the perfect girlfriend. Then she begins to think for herself and chaos ensues. Despite being AI, I wanted the best for her.

Dark Harvest –

This was so good and so sad! I love a good period piece; it's set in the 60's and it's mostly about what the boys have to sacrifice in this town. And I love a creature feature. Honestly just watch it because I cried a little.

Heart Eyes –

I'm a total fangirl for a good slasher and I think this would be a nice costume if anyone needs an idea. The lead is relatable too as she's a little messy and stumbles throughout the film, but you want the best for her.

Totally Killer –

Another slasher but in the 80's! I found it funny because it has modern humour but also pays tribute to the nostalgia. It's a cute watch if you have laundry to fold.

Sinners –

Okay this one had me gagged, praise be. Absolutely artistic, one of a kind, captivating, and tragically beautiful. I especially loved the scene where they (vampires) all dance outside because they haven't been invited into that ol' barn. That's a classic vampire trope and I respect the nuisance. Highly recommend.

Obsession –

I still struggle to find the words of how truly impacted I am about this film. I'm still stunned in the best way. I feel proud for the whole production. Sometimes low-budget films because the best cult classics and I think this is one of them. Everything was timed perfectly. I couldn't have picked a better film to actually watch. 11/10, highly recommend.

Check out these series if you're craving something longer:

Welcome To Derry –

The original IT movie scared the crap out of me as a kid. I couldn't look at anything red or be around balloons for the longest time. And then I came around to the remakes as an adult and I adore them. Then I gave this series a chance and I love it so much. It was a much needed prequel to set the story of iconic this clown is.

Something Very Bad Is Going To Happen –

I looooved this one too. She's so relatable and gorgeous and I wanted her to be loved but I wanted her to run. I think she displayed anxiety in one of its truest forms. The build up from to the last episode was executed really well and I thought that the colour palette suited this theme too. It's perfect. I wish there was a part 2 but then it stands on its own. Just watch it.
